Information and Support for the
Conveyancing Community in NSW

Professional Recognition

Members are recognised as professionals who are qualified, knowledgeable and experienced in conveyancing matters. Being an Institute member testifies to your dedication to continuing professional development and personal improvement.

Membership provides credibility amongst other professionals, clients and employers.

Visibility

Membership is always promoted by the Institute in their promotional activities, website and other activities.

www.findaconveyancer.com.au is a prominent web site used by consumers and other professionals to find a conveyancing business, all conveyancing businesses are listed free of charge on renewal of the business owner's membership.

Information

Membership allows access to information not necessarily available to non-members.

Access to seminar notes

Members have access to seminar notes provided on our web site. These notes are from seminars held by the Institute and provided by experts in the conveyancing field.

Web site

The Institute's web site www.aicnsw.com.au has lots of information for members and consumers. There is also a member's only section with more information specifically for members.

Weekly News Alert

All members receive a weekly news alert distributed via email.

The 'NSW Conveyancer' - magazine

Members receive the quarterly magazine of the profession containing information on conveyancing topics, changes to legislative procedures, topics on marketing your business and matters that may be of interest to a professional conveyancer both as an employee or conducting a business.

Professional Development

Members receive discounted rates to seminars, conferences, online education and webinars provided by the Institute. Through these events members are able to comply with their continuing education requirements and improve their knowledge and skills to keep up to date with legislative and procedural changes.

Annual Conference

A conference is held each year in the Sydney Metro area, a day on which all those who attend can obtain their annual continuing education requirements for licence renewal.

Evening seminars

With 10 evening seminars each year held mainly in the Sydney metro area but also Central Coast and Newcastle members have every opportunity to catch up on their continuing education.

Regional Days

Three regional days are held each year in order to assist those outside the Sydney Metro area obtain their continuing education requirements for licence renewal.

Online education

E-learning facilities are available all year round and we also conduct webinars whenever we can to assist with continuing education.

Professional and Personal Support

Employment Assistance

Access to Industrial Relations assistance through 'IR Assist' who provide members support with employment questions or problems.

Employment register

Help line

Confidential assistance with difficult or unusual transactions and situations through the Institute's members only help line.

Member services

The Institute provides many services to both business operators and employed conveyancers. These services are listed on our web site at www.aicnsw.com.au

We also have several business relationships that provide services such as:

- Title searching and full agency facilities
- Self issue of deposit guarantees
- Facilities to arrange title insurance
- Purchase a car without leaving your office
- Industrial Relations assistance

Community

As a member of the Institute you are part of the conveyancing community, mainly in NSW but you are also a part of a national profession which is growing all the time. Members are able to discuss and exchange ideas and form working relationships with other like professionals.

As part of a community of professional conveyancers with the same interests and professional ideals it is possible to increase your knowledge through meeting and speaking with other members of your community.

Improved Networking Opportunities

Through the Institute's professional development and other activities members are able to meet and network with other conveyancers and the related professionals that support the Institute through sponsorships or as business partners.

Best Practice Groups

Joining a best practice group in your area is another great way of networking with fellow conveyancers.

Advocacy and Representation

As a member of the Institute you have a voice in lobbying government and the professions regulators in issues that have an effect on your profession.

The institute, on behalf of its members, prepares submissions and makes representations to government departments, ministers etc. on such things as licensing, Professional Indemnity Insurance, legislation changes and regulatory policies.

The Institute is regularly asked to comment on matters pertaining to conveyancing and property generally.

The Institute regularly has members sitting on committees representing member's views.
